

A look at Manulife's disability insurance claims

Which conditions account for most disability claims?*

Disability results from a wide range of conditions, with musculoskeletal problems being the leading cause. Overall, our claims history reinforces the need for comprehensive disability coverage.

* Based on policy count of active claims at May 2006 for Manulife's individual disability insurance products, including Maritime Life policies and earlier acquisitions.

"Musculoskeletal" includes degenerative disc disease, arthritis, soft tissue damage to the back and joints

"Mental disorders" includes major depression, bi-polar disorder

"Nervous system" includes Multiple Sclerosis, Parkinson's and Alzheimer's

"Circulatory system" includes coronary artery disease, heart attack, stroke and congestive heart failure

"Digestive system" includes Crohn's disease, colitis, and irritable bowel syndrome

"Somatic conditions" includes chronic pain, chronic fatigue and fibromyalgia

"Miscellaneous" includes infectious disease, allergies and respiratory conditions

Who's claiming?

Disability can strike at any age, although the prevalence increases with age.

Current age	Percentage of policy holders	Percentage of claimants
Under 40	19%	3%
40-49	37%	17%
50-59	34%	43%
60 plus	10%	37%

Most claimants are male. However, when you compare the percentage of claimants to the gender split of our policies, females actually claim proportionately more.

	Percentage of policy holders	Percentage of claimants
Male	78%	72%
Female	22%	28%
